How to Take a Japanese Onsen Bath

Normally there are separate baths for male and female guests.

At each entrance, you will see short split curtains called noren printed with signs to indicate the following:For male "TONOGATA",and for female "ONNAYU" or "GOFUJIN".

Note: Do not bring bath towels, cameras or recording

You should not go into the bathtub right after coming from a dressing room.

Please pour hot water over yourself and clean your body by using a basin or shower beforehand ("washing" is not always necessary).

Of course, you want to be careful not to splash your neighboring guests.

The water is often kept at about 40° C in Japanese hot springs, and many Japanese people are accustomed to such a high temperature.

You will see a faucet to cool down the water at each tub, but please do not add too much cold water, which may affect the enjoyment of other guests.

Do not put your towel into the tub or wash your body using soap in the tub, as a hot spring is considered a "communal bath," which everyone
